THE TWO LIGHTS

'When I'm a man' the stripling cries
And strives the coming years to scan—
'Ah, then I shall be strong and wise
When I'm a man!'

When I was young, the old man says
Bravely the lark and linnet sang
Their carol under sunny skies
When I was young

When I'm a man I shall be free
To guard the right the truth uphold
When I was young I bent no knee
To power or gold'

Then shall I satisfy my soul
With yonder prize when I'm a man
Too late I found how vain the goal
To which I ran

When I'm a man these idle toys
Aside forever shall be flung
'There was no poison in my joys
When I was young

The boy's bright dream is all before
The man's romance lies far behind
Had we the present and no more
Fate were unkind

But brother toiling in the night
Still count yourself not all unblest
If in the east there gleams a light
Or in the west

One of the most striking characteristics of modern medicine is the importance assigned to nursing in the treatment of the sick Many diseases for which our forefathers used the most violent remedies are now known to tend naturally to recovery if the patient is only placed under favorable conditions so that a large part of the duty of the physician or surgeon is to see that his patient is well nursed and that the environment of the sick or injured person is such as will favor and not retard recovery Hence, in a case of severe illness, the medical attendant of the present day directs his attention less to the sharpening of his lancet and the devising of elaborate and voluminous mixtures of drugs than to the ventilation of the sick room the cleanliness of the patient, the preparation and administration of food, and the exclusion of harmful influences, and in the sick room the vast array of potions and unguents and the odor of drugs has been replaced, we will hope, by a neat and skilful nurse and a plentiful supply of fresh air

David Crockett once visited a menagerie at Washington and pausing a moment before a particularly hideous monkey exclaimed What a resemblance to the Honorable Mr X!' The words were scarcely spoken when he turned and, to his great astonishment, saw standing at his side the very man whom he had complimented 'I beg your pardon,' said the gallant colonel, I would not have made the remark had I known you were near me, and I am ready to make the most humble apology for my unpardonable rudeness but —looking first at the insulted member of Congress whose face was anything but lovely, and then at the animal compared to him— hang it if I can tell whether I ought to apologize to you or to the monkey!'

The stagnant water which has been suffered for years to accumulate and to cause fevers and fogs in the Coliseum at Rome has been drained off at last An ancient sewer, extending from the meta sudans to the Tiber was discovered and was connected with a drain from the Coliseum The water was admitted into this ancient sewer on the 3d of March, and the flood which filled the basement story of the famous amphitheatre of Flavius was gradually drawn off In cleansing the sewer there were found a quantity of ancient lamps with gladiatorial ornamentation, human skulls and bones of animals Much of the old Roman road in the Foro Romano is now exposed to view, and the ruins of the shops of the gold and silversmiths are visible

At the close of last month during a terrific storm at Venice, the square of St Mark's the piazzetta and principal streets were completely inundated by the high tide A large number of people were held captive in restaurants and in small by streets so elevated is not to be covered by water, while in the flooded parts masked revellers wading about bare legged, noisy mechanics and porters conveying on their backs womenfresh from balls and dressed in all sorts of finery and liggery, presented an amusing spectacle Travel on the canals was suspended, as the gondolas could not pass under the bridges and considerable damage was caused on all sides

A Philadelphia anchorite has distinguished itself by sensible behavior when a panic seemed inevitable The Chestnut Street Theatre was densely crowded Smoke poured up from the cellar filling the auditorium, somebody cried Fire, and everybody stood up The manager hurried in from his office and shouted 'There can't be any danger for you could all get out in three minutes Keep your seats and I'll tell you if there's a fire' Several hundred persons near the doors went out but the rest stayed, and were soon told that the smoke came from some smouldering rubbish

Any woman who enters into a correspondence with a man whom she has never seen and knows nothing about, with a view to matrimony, has only herself to blame if she is egregiously humbugged Report is made of "a Lost in lady' who is or was lately, in Quincy, Ill, looking for a lover with whom she has corresponded for some time, and who is not in Quincy or anywhere else A "personal' in an Eastern newspaper started the correspondence Every woman engaging in such a business may expect to be cheated in the same or a worse way The 'Boston lady is lucky in not finding her man

London is enjoying a new sensation in the amusement line Mr W R R Realston is telling 'stories to children' in St James Hall with such success that Mr Carlyle Mr Bret Harte and sundry other literary characters have fought their way in among the innocents to hear him, and white haired grandsires were as enthusiastic over his wonderful narratives as golden haired girls of seven and eight years old The magic seems to be partly in the tales, the work of authors as yet unknown, and partly in the telling, which has already made the teller a local celebrity

"Mrs Muriel took great interest in parish affairs Last year she promised to assist in decorating the parish church One illuminated text she thought would look well over the chancel screen, and she requested her husband to bring it from town As might have been expected he forgot the text, and wired to his wife for particulars To the surprise of all the telegraph clerks this message came flashing over the wires Unto us a child is born nine feet long by two feet broad' '—London Letter

Mrs Montague once said to Sir William Pepys, on seeing a very awkward man come into the room "There is a man who would give one of his hands to know what to do with the other"

Rose Eytinge, who is one of the best dressed women of the stage, has all of her costumes made in this country, and generally under her own supervision.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS IN JAPAN.

Some four years ago says a writer in the Tokio Times, the question of 'woman's rights' was for the first time brought before the public by Kato, Fukuzawa, and Mori, in a magazine called the 'Meiroku Zatsushi' After the exchange of some discussions the subject was dropped Recently it has been revived by a woman in a more practical form—that of a memorial to the authorities The words with which the first Japanese of her sex upholds her rights may be of interest, and they are accordingly translated from a recent number of the "Nichi Nichi Shinbun' 'There lives in Tosa Yamoroku lady named Kunanose Kita, who is now about forty years old She lost her husband some ten years ago, and has ever since been the head of her family During 1877 she frequented the meetings of the Risshisha society, and imbibed ideas of peoples rights and liberties Last year, when she found out that a woman, though the head of a family, was denied the right of voting for representatives in the Assembly, she presented the following memorial to the Ken Cho

"The district magistrates have urged me to pay my taxes, but I have objected to do so for these reasons Though a woman, I am the head of a family, and my obligations are the same as those of every other person so situated, and I am, therefore, entitled to the same treatment as they Yet I am informed by the magistrates that I can neither vote nor act as a witness to a document Thus there is a wide difference between me and other heads of families Obligations and rights must co exist If I possess the right of voting I am under the obligation of paying my taxes, if not, I can see no reason why I should pay It is in my eyes an injustice to be required to pay equal taxes with other heads of families, when equal rights are not granted I at first laid this matter before the district magistrates and they informed me that women were entitled to less rights than men because they were under no compulsion to serve in the army This is absurd, for no man, so long as he is the head of a family is liable to military service For these reasons I have objected to pay the taxes and I now lay the matter before you for decision

KUSANOZE KITA,
Shozoku

Meiji 11th year, 9th month, 16th day (September 16th, 1878)

To the Kochi Ken Rei

The following answer, dated five days later, was issued by the Ken Rei (governor) in the form of an order

'Taxes are a general obligation of all subjects to the State, and as there is no law regulating the amount thereof, in respect to increase or decrease with the greater or less amount of rights enjoyed by individuals, you are hereby ordered to pay at once the land and local expenditure taxes which are due

"There is nothing to prevent a woman from becoming a witness of a document'

Miss Kusanose is said to be dissatisfied with this order, and it is stated that she is about to appeal to the Department for Home Affairs, at Tokio

ANIMAL MAGNETISM —Prof Charcot has unexpectedly brought us back to the days of animal magnetism He has effected some curious experiments on hystero epileptic patients in the Salpetriere Hospital, producing catalepsy and somnambulism at will The subject, placed for a few seconds or minutes before the full blaze of a Drummond or an electric light, becomes fascinated The anæsthetic state is complete for he can be pinched, etc, without exhibiting pain The members display no rigidity, and preserve whatever attitude is given them The patient has become cataleptic In vain you speak or question him But the features reflect the gesture Place him in a tragic posture the physiognomy becomes severe and the eyebrows contract Bring the hands together as in prayer, the visage softens, and the features become supplicating Cut off the light, the patient drops into a somnambulistic or lethargic state He falls backward, the eyelids close, and if the skin be now rubbed, the part will contract as if under the influence of electricity, touching thus certain nerves the muscles of the face contort, and the head itself can be made to turn Here is the somnambulism Call the patient, he will rise up and walk to you Tell him to kneel and he will kneel to write, and he will write, to sew and he will mechanically, like a slave, the eyes being firmly closed Sometimes the answers give are more intelligible than when the patient is wide awake so much is the intelligence excited Blow your breath strongly in his face and the subject instantly awakens after a slight throat spasm and some froth on the lips but utterly ignorant of what has occurred The experiment can be repeated at will But the magnet as Dr Burq has shown in the case of metallic applications plays an important part during the stage of insensibility, the patient loses all sense of color, or the colors of all objects become grey, violet first disappears then green, next blue, and last red Double up the right arm, it will rest so Bring the magnet to act on the left arm, in a short time the right one will regain its suppleness, and the left arm take the same contracted form Music—strong bell ringing—can produce this anæsthetic condition as well as the lights referred to, hence, the action of sound is identical with that of light Steadily looking into the eyes will also produce the lethargic state But this is treading after Mesmer

The Mother Marjory, of whom George S Burleigh has sung in plaintive measure, has her antitype in a Mother Dildine a venerable shepherdess, as she was called of the Sierra Nevadas The writer in the Gold Hill (Nev) News, who describes this woman, fails to invest her with that poetic glamour which surrounds the better known "anchoress of sorrow' whom Burleigh has pictured as old and bent, shivering all alone in her hovel high up the rocky slope of a New England mountain Mother Dildine, in like manner, sees fit in her old age to dwell apart from humanity in one of the unsettled portions of Nevada She lives there in some way, all by herself, and, in winter, appears to be entirely isolated She is reported to have survived the rigors of last winter, and to be still able to attend to her stock of goats and chickens Her goats have rapidly increased from a very few to several hundreds They, however, in these mountain regions, can take care of themselves, all they wanted was a start in life In an extremity, last year she was obliged to kill her chanticleer, who used daily to awaken that vast solitude with his clarion horn and want valiantly for a response Some good Samaritan has, however, lately replaced him, and those hens have again hopes of posterity Mother Dildine is thus described in The News 'On her head she wears the inevitable sun bonnet He covering from this point down is what would be called of mixed gender She wears men's flannel shirts after the manner of mankind She has a budget (not a very elegant one, but a very expressive one) of old sacking about her loins Her supporters are encased in overalls, and she wears boots This style is both simple and inexpensive, as well as comfortable and convenient She bids fair to support it many years"

FEMININE NOTES

The newest lace is the black Breton

A new dress material is called Damasse bunting

Black satin slippers are studded with small steel beads

Worth's last dresses are shorter even than those worn here

Ten lady physicians graduated from Boston University Medical School this spring

They are going to put gold ornaments on the new bonnets, or gilt if the real stuff is not available.

Dr Mary Safford Blake is one of the Faculty of the Boston University Medical Schools

Painted ribbon or bands of satin are the newest thing in the trimming line for gals of the period

In evening silks are many more varieties of white than is usual, the demand for that color being very great

At the last election in New Hampshire numbers of women were elected to School Boards, all over the State

Mrs Freeman was chosen a member of the Malden, Mass, School Board, at the last election, by a large majority

Mrs Elizabeth Thompson Butler, who painted the 'Roll Call,' has two pictures in the London Academy this season

Two women in Vermont, Miss Leavens and Miss Post, were this spring elected to the office of Township Clerk Miss Post is also Township Treasurer

A new fancy is to face the skirts of dressy costumes with red silk under which the lace balayeuse is basted making a very striking and dressy effect

Englishwomen are wearing silver gray for their spring costumes It is becoming to brunettes, but the neutral tints in blonde hair do not well accord with it

Clear crystal beads are used on some of the light mantles, and on others silk acorn tassels are set on thick rows on grounds of chenille fringe and moss trimming

Rev Antoinnette Brown Blackwell having entered the ministry She was the first woman ever ordained to preach in this country

Mrs Mary L Carpenter School Superintendent of Winnebago county Ill has asked and obtained permission to include an educational exhibit in the display at the next county fair

The wages of male and female teachers come nearer to being equal in Colorado than in any other State of the Union Men average $4 190 per month pay, women $46 95 less than $5 difference

An attempt has been made to introduce feather trimming instead of flowers for ball dresses but young ladies object because feather trimming dresses make them look old A feather tuft in the hair is however much affected

A correspondent describes Mrs Jefferson Davis as a charming, sensible Christian woman, who understands the social and political questions of the time far better than the average of the male sex She has no hopes or aspiration in connection with 'the lost cause"

A evening dress for young ladies called the rosebud has been exhibited in New York It is a cream colored satin princess trimmed with fine kilt plaitings around the lower edge of the skirt, and with a box plaited flounce upon which lie loops of rose pink gauze, with its alternate stripes bruched in wreathes of rosebuds One side of the overdress is looped up by fringed scarfs embroidered with roses and trimming of the waist and sleeves is satin shells from which depend rosebuds

The new walking suits are chiefly of fine camel's hair cloth in grays light brown and the sage shades The most stylish are quite plain made in tailor style with several rows of machine stitching in white or colored silk near the edge of the garment, and no other trimmings but I finds me buttons In short, outfits billed all to order only at the back is quite short and a second skirt is draped across this, and tucked up behind The bodice is a requisite jacket or else a coat basque with waistcoat

A lady proposes that the housekeepers of every country neighborhood meet once in a fortnight or so and discuss matters pertaining to cooking and housekeeping Two or more articles of food must be selected beforehand and be cooked and eaten at each meeting and all the different ways of cooking each article described and commended or In this manner the best and healthiest methods of cooking and house keeping would thus soon become familiar to all the ladies of the club The social pleasures of such reunions would likewise be great

The Paris correspondent of the Baltimore Sun writes But the coming coiffure! No longer the sweet simplicity that robes of late the Athenian knot or the 'Lys statuaire will obtain in high society or classic reunions The outlines of the small and narrowly rounded head, so charmingly indicative of a lordly lineal brain, will again be hidden in the excessive decoration of what I may be permitted to call the Neo entire Renaissance of coiffure The modern graces of Greece are umbered for this season, and the luxurious fulness of Rome, Naples Milan and other Italian States will prevail in the style that marked the Burgian and the Machiavelian periods, and the days of Savonarola, the "weaponless prophet" The extravagance that Addison denounced is to be revived, and the chignons of colossal proportions resumed Lovely woman will not only now wear her own, but others' locks Even before leaving, England the other day I witnessed the coming agony in this intricate future of hair 'Fringes' of the future will be something beyond man's comprehension and chignons an enigma not to be unraveled by even the docile readers of society journals' And with the style, so also with the color—a change has come over the coiffure The once somewhat adulterous yellow or falsely flaxenhued crop with 'the bawdy, poppy, glittering upstart red in golden rows" now has to give way to deepened brown or raven black 'Eau de Blonde or 'Aqua Mira,' and "Aux comas' acid are now shelved Black, "without sin, danger or care, is the color, the proper thing in hair" Never mind if it does not suit, the tyrant fashion ordains it to be the correct color In parts of Asia the fashion of women's attire has not changed in 3 000 years' And how admirable they look in all the perfection of ease and poetry of dress In my time, in America, fashion has changed more than 3 000 times, and what is it in perfection or poetry today?

☞KINDRED EVILS —It is well known that a relationship exists between piles, constipation, kidney diseases and liver troubles In Kidney Wort we have a remedy that acts on the general system and restores health by gently aiding nature's internal processes Druggists keep it.

THE VIOLET.

Lonely and sweet a violet grew
In the meadow weeds among
One morn a rosy shepherd maid
With careless heart and idle tread
Came by
Came by
The meadow lands and sang

Ah' said the violet, 'would I were
Some stately garden flower!'
That I might gathered be and pressed
One little hour to her sweet breast
Ah me!
Ah me!
Only one little hour!'

On came the rosy shepherd lass
With heart that idly beat,
And crushed the violet in the grass
Alone said How sweet!
How sweet it said, with fainting moan
If I must die to die alone
For her
For her—
To die at her dear feet

SOCIAL EQUALITY AND CIVILIZATION —Matthew Arnold in his new book, "Mixed Essays,' maintains that with such inequality that now exists in England "a perfect civilization is impossible" On the one hand, the aristocratic class, with all its power of social life and manners, is invariably materialized, while for the class of newly enriched people it sets the example of a materialistic ideal they can easiest comprehend On the other, the people of the lower class, with the life of the middle class and its unlovely types of religion, thought, beauty and manners having no great attractions for them, fall back upon themselves—upon what Mr Goldwin Smith calls "their beer, gin, and their fun" All this tends to failure in civilization There are many qualities which go to complete a full humanization which means a true civilization Englland, it is true, has a strong sense of the power of conduct which Mr Arnold regards as the chief power in the life and progress of man But in the power of knowledge, of beauty, and of social life, she is inferior to other nations Certain races are on certain lines pre eminent and representative The Hebrew nation was pre eminent on one great line—its statutes and righteous judgments, the Hellenic race on another—its philosophy and its eloquence The power of beauty has been so great among the Italians that it was they who revived the almost lost idea of beauty and the serious and successful pursuit of it To the Germans belong the power of knowledge, which in the same way is eminently an influence with them Last of these elements of civilization, and one of the greatest, is the power of social life and manners which the French possess above all other modern people Without this a nation is incomplete Men are made equal by the humanity of their manners Hence it was not the spirit of philanthropy which mainly impelled the French to the great revolution, no was it the spirit of envy or a love of abstract ideas, though all these did something toward it what did most was the spirit of society Thus it is equality which has given to France so much of the goodness and agreeableness of life, and brought her to a really admirable and enviable pitch of humanization in one important line, so much so that some writers have been inclined to pronounce France the most civilized of nations To remedy the inequality that exists in England there must be a change in the law of bequest as there has been in France The code Napoleon, the actual law of France, forbids entails altogether

So much is said about the discipline of colleges, and frequent and serious troubles make the subject so important, that it may be useful to allude to what is told us of the methods adopted by the late Dr De Koven As president of Racine College, he was uncommonly successful in winning the profound respect of the students Yet his measures were as mild as they were judicious He had a regular weekly reception, and when he found that a lad needed advice or reproof was getting a little unsteady and in want of admonition, his custom was to ask him to come to his house upon a stated evening This was a compliment to begin with The visitor was received with the kindliest urbanity, was set at once at his ease, and passed an agreeable hour When it was convenient it to do so, the Doctor would take his visitor aside and 'gently deal with him' as the Quakers say The warning manner, all climate remonstrance and tender expostulations of Dr De Koven were rarely wasted The most unmanageable youth became docile under such treatment and felt keenly the shame of giving pain to so excellent a man The students of Racine College became exceedingly fond of their president, as well as proud of him He had found out that the secret of good government was not in harsh reproof, in monitions, rebuke, in disgraceful penalties Nor did it matter one other college precedents who to a greater or less extent pursue a similar course, but the method was so well marked in President De Koven's administration, and its results were so eminently satisfactory that a memorial of it is due to his honored memory

NEW CHINA FOR THE WHITE HOUSE —A Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says At last the White House china is to be renewed Since Mrs Lincoln's untutored taste ordered the set with its brilliant Solferino covering and centre piece of shield, stars and stripes and spread eagle this terribly national porcelain has been spread before the startled gaze of Americans and foreigners alike The only thing about the matter I in the least regret is that the new set is ordered from the Haviland Company, Limoges, France It would have been so much more creditable had some of our own manufacturers been allotted the task, with the injunction to excel in this branch, as they are fast doing in all others We used to send to France for all our dainty note paper Now France sends to us as our work is finer, our styles more original, and our prices lower Our toys are better than those made in Germany, our silks are fast coming up to the Lyons standard. Why when we have such beautiful china here, should we patronise foreign marts? If we were as proud of our productions as the French are of theirs we would nurse our industries to the highest state of perfection by always giving them the preference The new set ordered for the White House is said to be exquisite, the pieces of each course being different in shape and design, and each piece a study and work of art

☞NO WHITE BUTTER —People will not in these days buy white butter, and any men of good judgment use the Perfected Butter Color of Wells, Richardson & Co, Burlington, Vt It does not freeze in winter or mould in summer and is always ready for instant use

☞BEWITCHING WORK —There is a fascination in renewing all the ribbons, stockings, shawls and dresses in the house by the use of Leamon's Dyes made by Wells, Richardson & Co, Burlington, Vt The colors are superb and of every shade. Druggists have them

A doctor to his son "Johnny, would you like to be a doctor?" "No, father." "Why not, my son?" "Why, father, I could not even kill a fly."

The late Professor Clifford, oddly enough, was at one period of his life an ardent High Churchman and a zealous student of theology His knowledge of the "Fathers,' it is said was perhaps unequalled by that of any bishop on the bench

A witty lady was once told by a gentleman of her acquaintance that 'he must have been born with a silver spoon in his mouth" She looked at him carefully, and, upon realizing the size of his mouth, replied 'I don't doubt it, but it must have been a soup ladle'

Practical Yankee "Well yes sir I give in to you Shakespeare was a genius But he didn't kinder seem to put it to a practical use Never benefited civilization with a washing machine, nor a patent turnip peeler, nor anything of that sort Still, he was a smart man

The Derrick thus elaborates the statement that there are nine feet of snow in Berks county 'The snow is four and five feet deep in Berks county' The story grew out of a Berks county Dutchman's reply to an inquiry why that the snow was nine feet deep "I simply answered Nein!'

The huge monoside of a Boston machinist proved worthless, because somebody had already patented the same invention, and the disappointment crazed him He is possessed by the hallucination that his brains were taken out to be repaired and have never been put back into his head That is why, he thinks, that he cannot control his mind

Mr William Morris, poet and upholsterer, is now busy in practising the art of weaving Not only is he endeavoring to carry out practically some of his own designs, but in order to secure the tints he requires, and to be certain that the colors he obtains are permanent he has set to work to dye his own fabrics and to study exhaustively the nature of dyes

It is told of James Russell Lowell that when he was last in Rome a mendicant monk met the poet in the Corso one day and asked for a contribution to repair a monastery You should not ask me for aid" remarked Lowell in choice Tuscanese," "for I am a heretic" 'That makes no difference,' replied the astute friar, 'your money is orthodox The poet appreciated the witticism and made the contribution asked

TASTE IN ORNAMENTAL TREE PLANTING —Mr Samuel Parsons makes the following suggestions in a paper on Lawn-planting, for Small Places in Scribner for March "As a rule, also, never plant a large, dark evergreen in front of, and very near, a brilliant light colored, deciduous tree, for thus planted it will dwarf and weaken the effect of the latter On some lawns, however a few massive dark evergreens may be used with effect in the extreme, and, if possible, northwest corner of the lot They will protect and give character to the place, and heighten the effect of the deciduous trees A striking contrast may be obtained by interspersing a few white birches among, and in front of, these evergreens They will serve, in this case, to brighten the picture both winter and summer—though usually we prefer not to mix evergreen and deciduous trees This harmonious and contrasting disposition of color requires careful studys, even perhaps a natural gift. For instance, it is better to introduce gay, bright colors in well judged proportions A few bright flowers of deep red, blue or yellow, will have a better effect dispersed here and there about the lawns than in one great mass Introduce them, so that by means of their different natures there will be always during the season a few gay points in the picture."

THE OLD RESIDENT.

There are some people who fondly cling to the Old Resident. The words that drop from his lips have a peculiar charm for them. His views and opinions are studied with care, and his acts furnish a pattern which they copy with the utmost diligence. The Old Resident is a hero worshipped with almost as much veneration as the gods of old. He is as a patriarch in the house of Israel, and he receives the adulation of his subjects with that nonchalant air which pretenders strive in vain to acquire, and which only Old Residents know how to correctly assume.

There is no "bigger man" in all the United States than our Old Resident. What he don't know of law is not worth knowing. Why doctors disagree is no mystery to him, and as a weather prophet he acknowledges no equal. The secret motives that govern the actions of kings and potentates, of Presidents and Cabinets are as an open book to him. His predictions of the future policy of political parties are given with that forcible enunciation of speech and strong reasoning from facts which force the inevitable conclusion that admits of no doubt. He knew that Hayes would be the President de facto and Tilden President de jure long before the elections took place, and to-day, if he is asked, he will tell you who President Hayes' successor will be.

The Old Resident emphatically knows what is what. He will not be imposed upon. He can separate wheat from chaff, and before you can say "Jack Robinson," he is ready to give you a solution to any question, moral, social, scientific, or what not.

The Old Resident is likewise a great stickler for things as they used to be. In his opinion the present is a wonderfully degenerate age. In the good old times when he was young the people were not so vain, so bigoted, so extravagant, so vicious, so completely lost as they are now. He regrets the present extravagance of dress, the squandering of so much money in the adornment of persons and homes, and the exceeding restlessness of the people as shown in their migratory movements from one section of the country to another.

The Old Resident does not confine his remarkable powers to the discussion of subjects of world wide importance. He oftimes condescends to concentrate his faculties to the consideration of borough affairs, and, by a process of reasoning, in which his age and long practice render him an adept in a comparison of the times when he was a trusted [illegible] with the present, he shows how utterly and completely the borough is now going to the very dogs.

The Old Resident dislikes change of any kind. He objects to the material progress of the borough. The steam whistles of the factories, the noise produced by the carpenter's hammer, the jostling of the crowds of workmen going to and returning from their labors, and the strange faces he meets on every side give him the most disagreeable sensations and fill his heart with sadness. He longs for the times that have [illegible] away. As his memory carries him back to a few years, he sees, "in his mind's eye," numerous flocks of stately geese meandering unmolested over the silent commons. He sees the quiet of the principal thoroughfares undisturbed and void of life save when a stray hen with her progeny around her contentedly basks in the dust, or a solitary dog looks up and down the long line of houses with such a peaceful expression upon his countenance that it convinces one that the phrase "a dog's life" must mean a very easy one, and he laments that it is out of his power to restore the serenity of this state to the borough once more.

The Old Resident years ago considered Bristol a finished town. All it needed was to fence it in and then whitewash the fence. He carefully picked his way while walking the streets, and in avoiding mud holes and water puddles, exhibited that dexterity which only long practice can give. Each succeeding day was a counterpart of the one gone before, and until a stranger came, valise in hand, with the intention of making Bristol his home, did the Old Resident have any notion that the quiet of his native town was to be disturbed. He immediately foresaw the result, and "buckling on his armor, offensive and defensive," began a warfare against the "Carpet Bagger," as the stranger was contemptuously called, and from that day to the present time a gradual change has been wrought in the condition of things, of which we propose to say something in the forthcoming issue of the GAZETTE.

—The politicians in Washington say that the revolutionary course entered upon by the Democrats in Congress will give Ohio to the Republicans next Fall by a large majority. It will produce a similar feeling to the one produced in 1863 when the Ohio Democracy nominated that double dyed traitor, C. L. Vallandigham, as their candidate against the sturdy patriot, John Brough. The contest was fierce and bitter, but the result showed what the people of Ohio can do in an emergency. Brough's majority was over 100,000, the largest ever obtained by the candidate of any party in that State. Vallandigham's spirit still lives, and his successors are in a majority in Congress. Now, as in 1863, they need to be buried out of sight beneath the waves of popular indignation and disapprobation.

—Frederick Douglas says that the exodus of the colored people from the South is owing to the oppression of the white race, and that this question will be prominent in the next Presidential campaign. When the country sees that the issue presented is whether the loyal, intelligent, and industrious masses be permitted to aid in making its laws, or whether these laws shall be made by those who degrade labor and wrong the laborer, there can be no doubt as to the result.

—President McCosh, of Princeton College, has become a citizen of the United States by naturalization.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 23, 1879.

EDITOR GAZETTE:—The exodus of the negroes from the South is fast assuming most serious proportions and may yet call for governmental attention. Were the exodus confined to certain bull dozed districts, no one would deprecate it. But it is really strongest from sections where the negro has never been troubled on account of any political action and where he can more easily make a support for himself and family than in the West without capital. Little is required to maintain a colored family in any cotton region, but the West with its privations must necessarily prove disastrous to the major portions of the blacks going there. Our reason for apprehending the need of rational inquiry arises from an observation of the character of the negro given by several years station in a southern State as an officer of the Freedman's Bureau, and extensive travel subsequent to discharge. We found the ex slave extremely credulous and strongly inclined to believe any statement, no matter how absurd, that would take him away from work. If any mischievous fellow, during the political canvas of 1868, in my district which covered nearly one fourth of the State would ride through any rural district and give out that every colored voter must report on any designated day to headquarters, the plow, harvest, tobacco, etc., would be summarily abandoned, and no power or self interest could retain the laborer at his work. He must go and see for himself, no matter how much injury was entailed upon his crops or employer. We had constantly to combat with the 40 acres and a mule, which the negroes generally believed to be theirs and we firmly believe that we some smooth talking colored man permitted to canvas the Southern States for an army to go West to get this land and animal, his recruits would be numbered by the million. His statements would be accepted implicitly and his dupes would follow him as blindly and madly as sheep their leaders. The facts show that back of this exodus are western swindling scoundrels, who hope to reap more or less reward through fleecing these emigrants, and in view of our knowledge of the negroes' credulity we fear the time is near at hand when a higher power than the unreasoning instinct of these ex slaves must be exercised to prevent a wholesale migration, which will come if no check be given to the circulation of lying specious statements among them, about free lands and free homes in the West. Our knowledge of his character in his southern home and of the west teaches us that he is poorly fitted indeed for battling with the adverse influences which obtain in all new countries. He has no means nor is he by nature or education qualified to make headway on the prairies. The great destitution found among them in St. Louis and Kansas City, is but the beginning of the end, and we earnestly hope some means will soon be found to reduce the exodus to that point which will not bring such distress on women and children.

The Congressional outlook is hardly interesting. The Senate is pounding away at the Army Bill. Senator Withers who has it in charge, promises us a vote on it [illegible] and [illegible] discussion from [illegible] until the bill is disposed of. It is [illegible] to make such a [illegible] in a [illegible] whose fate was decided in advance but empty benches and galleries greet us in the Senate Chamber, excepting when Mr. Blaine, or General Logan, or some big Democratic gun in reply are announced to speak.

The House pegs away at the Legislative Bill, and as one hundred members are [illegible] for a speech on it no one can tell [illegible] when the windmill will stop, that a vote may be taken.

The free coinage of silver men are happy over the fact that they have the majority of House Banking Committee, and the people may expect a deluge of silver as well as greenbacks, in so far as this Committee is able to give it to the country.

Hanging is played out here. Our juries have of late persisted in acquitting in every shooting or murder case save in that of a colored woman tried for infanticide. But they strongly recommend her for clemency inasmuch as she has hardly sense enough to be a responsible being. She was sentenced to be hanged, but no one supposes that she will suffer the penalty, hence our remark that hanging is played out here.

Fitz John Porter's friends here are exultant over the finding of the Court Martial in his favor, and all our Democratic papers announce it as a great victory. We are rather glad of it too, not that he did not deserve what he got, but because he was not half so guilty as others through whom Pope was crushed.

HARRISBURG LETTER.

HARRISBURG, April 19, 1879.

A second gubernatorial reception was given last Thursday evening at the executive mansion. Although it had been raining all day, and still coming down at a rate that was damaging to polished boots, the guests began to arrive about 8½ o'clock, and were received by Governor Hoyt, Mrs. Hoyt, Lieutenant Governor Stone and family, also ex Governor Hartranft, Miss Hoyt, and Miss Pomeroy and young Mr. Hoyt stood in line and assisted in receiving.

The mansion was a perfect fairy land of flowers. The stairway was trimmed with calla lilies and green leaves, the chandeliers were festooned with smilax, the banqueting hall was hung with garlands, bouquets of choice exotics and roses stood around in prodigal confusion, and their mingled fragrance was wafted about us like a breath from "the sweet South that breathed upon a bank of violets." Elegant and appropriate floral decorations called forth expressions of surprise and admiration. One, representing the Keystone, stood on a solid base about five feet high, was a beautiful design.

Among the notable persons present were Hon. Galusha A. Grow, Hon. J. Donald Cameron, Adjutant General Latta, and the Governor's staff in full military dress, as also a representation of the National Guard. The ladies were present in due proportion, and the presentation of beauty was a great improvement upon the former reception, and the display of grace and fashion was creditable to the capital of the State.

The large parlor in the second story was filled with gay and festive dancers, and a string band of this city "done" the music. The refreshments consisted of coffee, chocolate, and lemonade. The porter's count at the door made the number of visitors 716, consequently the Governor had to shake hands about that many times from 8 to 12 o'clock, and repeat, as you congratulate when you come in and bid good by when you depart. The whole affair was a splendid success, and everybody seemed to be well pleased. The dancing stopped at 12 o'clock, and the crowd of visitors departed at once in [illegible].

The Little Boy and his Crusts.

One night at supper, Peter ate the soft part of his slice, but put the crust, the upper crust, under the rim of his plate. Then he bent low and whispered to his knife and fork—

'Now don't tell.'

Next he tucked the bottom crust under the other side of his plate, and bent low again, and whispered to his spoon and napkin ring—

'Now don't tell.'

And that night he dreamed of seeing his plate on the chamber floor, and that the two long crusts crept out towards him like two long caterpillars and they every moment grew longer and larger.

'What two funny things you are!' said Peter.

Then the two things turned and crept slowly slowly out towards the door. And there they stretched out and stood upon end and looked at Peter and spoke. And the sound of their voices was dry, and come, like the crackling of crusts between sharp teeth. And they said—

'O you dainty boy! So you would eat only the soft. Come now and be [illegible] [illegible]!'

'I would do so,' [illegible] Peter.

'How do we know [illegible]?' said the [illegible]. 'Come quick. Do as [illegible]. Do as we do!'

Then the two things crept down stairs, [illegible], and [illegible] the front yard and up the street and across the [illegible] [illegible] while Peter, [illegible] [illegible] behind. But when they [illegible] a high board fence [illegible] said—

'O I can never [illegible] [illegible]!'

At that moment a Pepper Box [illegible] and called out—

'Stand! you are my prisoner. Follow me. Now! Straight! Forward! March!'

Then Peter stood upstraight and marched behind.

'So you wouldn't eat the crusts, dainty boy!' cried the Pepper Box in uniform, turning about with a fierce face. It spoke [illegible] and Peter and at very short [illegible] [illegible] into his eyes, causing the tears to run, run, run, like two rivers.

'O, O! I wonder who told, cried Peter. I won't know who told. My tears! Sweet good mamma, come wipe my tears.'

'They will do to soak your crusts in,' said some fine silvery voices near.

Peter looked behind to see where the voices came from, and beheld all the napkin-rings rolling, hopping, skipping, after one another, and all making fun of him. And the head one was his own tell tale! 'Tell tale!' called out Peter.

'Order in the ranks!' shouted the Pepper Box in uniform. 'Quick! Forward! [illegible]! Make way there! Disperse the crowd!'

'What crowd?' asked Pete.

'Look and see,' cried the Pepper Box in uniform.

Then Peter saw that all the knives and forks were standing about, whispering together,—all but the carving knife that had lain down to rest. The whispering went on:

'Who is this?'

'Peter.'

'Where is he going?'

'To prison.'

'What for?'

'To learn.'

'Learn what?'

'To eat.'

'Eat what?'

'His crusts.'

Then there was a loud tittering and laughing.

'O dear!' cried Peter. I begged them not to tell. I bent my head low and begged them not to tell. But O! they went and told. Mean! Mean!'

'Order in the ranks!' cried the Pepper Box in uniform.

They kept marching on and soon came to three bright, smiling, shining rows, one above another. In the first row were the grandmothers, these were the big spoons. In the second row were their daughters, these were the tea spoons. In the third row were their grand daughters, these were the salt and mustard spoons.

They spoke not a word, but only smiled coldly upon him as he passed, as much as to say—

'Yes, we know, we know all about it.'

'And among them Peter saw his own, marked 'Petie.' Then he groaned and said—

'O how could you? How could you go and tell?'

His own spoke not a word, but only smiled that same cold smile.

And just then the Baker came along.

'O I am so hungry!' cried Peter.

'Well, here is a loaf,' said the Baker.

Peter took it gladly. It smelled nice, and was of a beautiful color. But upon taking a bite he found it was crust all the way through.

'That or none,' called out the Baker from the back end of his cart.

'It's very hard,' cried Peter, with the tears in his eyes. And he felt for his jack knife. But his nightgown had no pocket in it.

'His teeth want sharpening, that they do,' cried a voice near by.

Peter looked up, and saw standing there a tall man dressed in yellow. He had on a cap shaped like a long necked squash, with the neck hanging down behind.

'His teeth want sharpening,' cried Squash Cap. 'But who'll turn the grindstone?'

'I will,' cried a short, fat man in a white apron.

'And who are you?' said Squash Cap.

'I'm the French cook,' said the white aproned man. 'I make good pies, and I'll turn the grindstone.'

'But who'll pour on the water?' cried Squash-Cap.

'I know his tricks. I'll pour on the water,' cried a little barefoot boy.

'And who are you?' cried Squash Cap. 'Who are you running about in your [illegible] [illegible], with your trousers [illegible] and your peaked [illegible]?'

'I'm the jolly baker's boy,' said he. 'I know his tricks and I will pour on the water.'

Then Squash Cap held poor Peter over, while the fat French cook turned the handle and the jolly Baker's boy poured on the water.

And [illegible] all those [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] sniffed?

[illegible]

Then [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] prison!' [illegible]

[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

'I am very glad to see you, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] I am lonely, very. How did you get here?'

'By creeping along,' they said, 'creeping, creeping, over and under. The crawls [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. You will have to eat your way out. Good bye. We are going.'

Then [illegible] sat down and cried 'O dear! O dear! O dear!' as loud as he could.

'Do you like pie?' Peter wiped his eyes with his nightgown sleeve, and then turned to see who asked him the question. And there stood the fat French cook with the rolling pin in his hand. 'Do you like pies?' he asked, sternly.

'Very much,' answered Peter.

'Which part do you like best, the outside part or the middle part?'

'The middle part,' said Peter, very quickly.

'Well, then come with me to the kitchen,' said the French cook, with a grim smile.

In the kitchen great fires were burning, and the ovens were well heated. The French cook took his rolling pin and rolled out pie crust enough to line a very large platter. He then [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] up with the upper crust.

'Now you have the middle part,' cried the French cook. 'It is [illegible], it is all made of the crusts you left at table, done over.'

'O how I am punished!' Now I am punished!' cried Peter. 'But, O Mr. French cook, pie eaters have [illegible] [illegible] pricked in them to breathe through.'

'Very true,' said the French cook, 'and I will now prick the holes.'

So he took the toasting fork and at every prick Peter squirmed and jumped, which made the upper crust look very funny.

'Quiet inside there!' shouted the French cook. 'Do you prefer a quick oven or a slow oven? Put your mouth to the holes and answer.'

So Peter put his mouth to the holes and called out, 'A slow oven.'

'You shall be [illegible] [illegible],' said the French cook. 'Hey, you boy! you barefoot, shoeless, [illegible], peaked [illegible] [illegible], jolly baker's boy, help me here with this big pie. It's called a Peter pie.'

But Peter found even the [illegible] [illegible] to be [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. He turned and [illegible] and [illegible] and turned, and at last he [illegible] out of the platter.

He [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] rolled out of the platter, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and came down bang upon the floor.

'Oh dear! Oh dear! [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] won't [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Then [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] coming up stairs.

'What's the matter? What's the matter?'

'I—[illegible]—[illegible]—[illegible]—[illegible] bed,' [illegible] Peter.

SIDERN.

—Foster's store has been moved to Bath Street.

—Base ball does not boom much at present.

—Shad are scarce and fishermen are despondent.

—Spring fever has been very prevalent this week.

—Water lilies will soon be in bloom at the mill pond.

—Several large rafts have gone down the river during the past week.

—White violets and blue have made their appearance in the fields.

—The Choral Society contemplate giving a concert about the first of June.

—A calathumpian serenading party came to grief, in the third ward, last week.

—Joseph S. Peirce has commenced the erection of two houses on Lafayette Street.

—Ellwood Doron is making an improvement to his coal sheds at Market street wharf.

—Tom and Maria go over into one another's back yards now and give Pinafore with variations.

—Our Army Post is making arrangements for decorating the graves of the soldiers next month.

—C. F. Mertz is making preparations to establish a bakery at the corner of Washington and Pond streets.

—To-morrow evening at the Methodist Church a sociable will be held by members of the Church and Sunday School.

—The tuneful voice of the frog is now heard in the land, but there are worse croakers, not a hundred miles from Bristol, than the frogs.

—Judging from the appearance of a variety of flowers which are offered for sale, Spring appears to have come to several of our stores.

—It is rumored that the Intelligencer will in a short time relinquish the publication of its semi-weekly edition, and become again a weekly journal.

—Last Saturday the house and lot opposite the bank, the property of Benjamin Headley, deceased, was sold to Charles E. Scott for $2,425.

—Mr. Jesse B. Mears will again, this summer, devote his time to organizing excursions to Cape May in the interests of the steamer Republic.

—In consequence of the death of Miss Corey the sociable of the Presbyterian Sunday School, appointed for to-morrow evening, will not be held.

—Mrs. A. M. Gear has added to her shoe store a dry goods and trimming department, and under the new arrangement the place presents an attractive appearance.

—About half a dozen canal schooners have gone up or down the river within the past few days—quite a contrast to the time, years ago, when Bristol was an important coal shipping station.

—The funeral of Jesse S. Heston was attended by a large number of people, on Monday, and the flag at the water works was displayed at half-mast as a mark of respect to the deceased.

—At the regular meeting of the Home Building Association last Monday evening five loans were sold to Mrs. Rousseau, one and a half to Thomas Douglass, and one to Manus Waters at par.

—A little girl named Hattie Randall fell over the banister at the secondary school, on Tuesday, and cut her neck and was otherwise injured, although not dangerously, and had to be carried home.

—There is a new millinery store on Mill street, and the window of the establishment, as well as the windows of the other millinery emporiums which are glistening with spring styles, attract the feminine eye.

—Joseph Parker has sold his drug store to H. Gates Peters, who formerly had charge of the establishment before Mr. Parker purchased the place. The stand is an old one, and a good one, and no doubt the new proprietor will find the business a successful one.

—A dog on Mill street, on Monday, became hungry for spring chickens, and started out in search of that delicacy. He killed about a dozen little chicks belonging to Dr. Groom, who forthwith procured his gun, and soon the dog was in a condition to have a coroner's inquest held upon his remains.

—One Bristol Democrat has announced that he will refrain from voting at the next Presidential election if Tilden is nominated, and another says he wouldn't grieve himself to death if Providence should see fit to to make Samuel J. an immediate inhabitant of the spirit land. There is evidently a field open in our borough for the use of one of Uncle Sammy's "bars."

—It was not Mr. Booz but another Connilman who at the last meeting of Council said in reference to a recent article that it was one "which no decent man would write and which no decent paper would publish." Instead of this Mr. Booz states that he said that he had until recently been in favor of dividing the printing equally between the two papers, but several weeks ago an article appeared in the Observer which was no credit to the man who wrote it or the paper which printed it.

—The Intelligencer contains the remarkable intelligence that Captain Cone will again take charge of the Republic this summer, "other reports to the contrary notwithstanding." We would be pleased to hear where these "other reports" have been circulating. It would certainly be strange for Captain Cone to cease managing the steamer he owns a controling interest in. Our contemporary is likewise informed that a broad-gauge railroad from Cape May landing to the city proper, is to take the passengers over. This will no doubt prove an additional attraction to the Republic's excursions.

—Last Saturday at the Friends meeting house, corner of Wood and Cedar streets the Bucks County First-day School Union was held. Among those who spoke were Ellwood Longshore, of Philadelphia, Dr. Janney, of Moorestown, N. J., James Hulme, of Mount Holly, and William Lloyd, Joseph Flowers, Louisa Wright, Samuel Swain, Anthony Swain, and Elizabeth Paxson of this county. At half past ten o'clock the morning session was opened by the reading of the report of the business committee, by the clerk, A. J. Ellicott. A communication from Lavinia H. Cox, the assistant clerk was read, stating her inability to be present, and Fanny J. Smith of Buckingham, was chosen to act in her place during the meeting. Reports from all the schools, except one, were received and read. The one from Doylestown stated that the time of holding their school had been changed from 11 to 10 o'clock, which made a decrease in the number of pupils in attendance. This introduced the subject of changing the time of holding the sessions of the schools, and after being pretty throughly considered the sense of the union appeared to be that changes, if made at all, should only be made with caution, each school determining for itself the advisability of making changes. The report from Doylestown also contained, in relation to the death of Henry T. Darlington, a fitting memorial. The report from Newtown made appropriate mention of Thomas Janney, who passed away since the last meeting of the union. Three reports laid special importance upon the question of temperance, and altogether the reports gave considerable encouragement in the cause of the First Day Schools, and it owed that they are now doing and may still do a good work. To Wrightstown school had been referred the question "Is too great severity in home discipline commensurate with Quakerism?" It was answered in a well written essay, in which the sentiment appeared to be predominant that although some children are so constituted that it seems almost impossible to do without using some severity still there is a germ of good in the most evil which can only be reached by kindness, and that the proper way to rule is by firmness tempered with gentleness. The roll of delegates was then read, and the following answered to their names: Edgewood, Susanna Rich, Frank F. Wood; Langhorne, Jeremiah Whitson, Sallie Palmer, Ella Livezey, Rettie Ivins; Penn's Manor, Amos R. Ellis; Newtown, Lavinia Trego; Bristol, Rebecca Iredell, Mary W. Wharton, Anthony Swain; Makefield, Hemlotta Burroughs; Buckingham, Fanny J. Smith; Solebury, Allie Ely, Sallie J. Reeder, Edward Phillips, William T. Eastburn; Yardleyville, Lettie W. Twining, Annie M. Stapler; Wrightstown, Oliver A. Holcomb, Cynthia S. Holcomb, Annie Scarborough. The Union then adjourned until after dinner. At 1:45 P. M., the Union reassembled. The report of the delegates to the meeting in Philadelphia was received. Sallie Bunting from Newtown school, read Whittier's "Vision of Echard" Franklin P. Flowers, from Edgewood school gave a recitation; and the business committee reported that they had selected Makefield for the next meeting of the union, on the 27th of 9th month, at 10 o'clock, A. M. To Plumstead school was referred, "What can be done to keep parents and children in meeting after the First Day School?" As the school never had any difficulty of that nature, they could give no answer. A young lady from Langhorne school gave a reading entitled "Sunshine Follows Clouds and Rain;" Doylestown school in place of an essay sent a tribute to the memory of Henry T. Darlington, which was a review of his life and work, written in a very appreciative manner by Judge Watson, of Doylestown; seven little girls from Bristol school gave an interesting class exercise, and a class of boys answered some questions from a temperance catechism. Several Friends spoke earnestly in favor of temperance, and of the evil of tobacco, and impressed upon the minds of the boys the importance of abstaining from the use of strong drink and tobacco. Ella M. Wright, of Penn's Manor, read an essay upon "The Results of First Day School Work;" Allie Harding, a little fellow just learning to talk, recited one of the psalms; Dr. George W. Adams, of Bristol, read a essay upon "Our Mission," and William Lloyd, from Makefield school, read a paper upon "The Results of First-day School Work." Louisa Wright spoke of complaints which she had heard of children disturbing the solemnity of the meetings, and thought efforts should be made to prevent such occurrences. Samuel Swain made an eloquent appeal for the children, and thought the slight inconvenience they caused should be overlooked for the sake of encouraging them to attend the schools, where they are sure to hear something for both their present and future good. Other Friends agreed with this view though one or two while concurring with it thought it practicable to prevent interruptions in the meetings. The Union then adjourned to meet at Makefield, on the 27th of 9th month, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Thus closed one of the most interesting meetings of the kind ever held in Bristol. The best of feeling existed, and everything passed off harmoniously, and with the best wishes for the success of the cause the members separated, encouraged to work in their respective fields of labor with even more zeal than heretofore.

—The spring has come and the tardy sun has showered its vernal blessing on the lea; the clouds have set their sails ashant and sailed into New Jersey. The grass is emerald green again; the umbrella man is on his patient way exploring all the quickening plain, that felt the touch of yesterday. The zephyr, loitering along, sang out in notes so sweet and clear, a cheering resurrection song into the wild flower's listening ear; a song whose music never fails to move to gladness bud and tree; and clouds have set their shining sails and drifted over to New Jersey. And over the glistening, hurrying, tide the plashing of oars was plainly heard, this morning, as the fishermen, with pride and joy, told what occurred when drawing in their net, with the lines stretched out so very taut, they found their boat so near upset with the load of fishes they had caught, and they manned their oars so cheerfullee, and rowed away from New Jersey; while over the town flew the tidings glad, that Eber Stremback had captured five shad.

☞ Hop Bitters, Green's August Flower, and a full line of all patent medicines at H. G. Peters' Drug Store, No. 63 Mill street.

—A colored convention was in session at New Orleans on Thursday and Friday last. The report of the Committee on Address made a report setting forth the disparity in the white and colored population in the Red River district of Louisiana; alleging that if the colored men were given their rights, they would carry the elections, and declaring that they would emigrate and settle beyond the reach of shotguns.—A number of prominent colored men of St. Louis have organized a "Colored Immigration Aid Society," with J. Milton Turner as President and Alfred Burgess as Secretary. The association has been incorporated and is intended to be permanent. Old John Brown's son has connected himself with the movement and will give his time and money, without pay, to it, having in view the betterment of this persecuted race.

—Eastburn Reeder, of Salsbury, has been requested by the Pennsylvania Board of Agriculture to prepare a brief yet comprehensive agricultural history of Bucks county. As this work is to be performed without compensation of any kind Mr. Reeder asks for the co-operation of the people of the county. Any one in possession of appropriate information should forward it to him by mail, addressed to New Hope. No matter whether the facts at hand are few or many, important or unimportant; send them along and assist in the collection and preservation of data in relation to our local agricultural history. The report will be published for circulation by the Board of Agriculture.

—Remarkable electric storms are said to occur on the summit of Pike's Peak. Little thunder accompanies them, but the whole mountain seems to be on fire and the top one sheet of flame. Electricity comes out of every rock and dirt here and there with indescribable radiance. An observer says that it played around him continuously; shot down his back; glanced out of his feet and so completely filled him that he became charged like a Leyden jar. He could not retain his foothold; he bounded and rebounded from the rocks after the manner of an india rubber ball; he felt as though a powerful battery were throbbing through his frame, and fearing the consequences he hurried into the signal station.

—By the laws of Kansas, women stand upon an entire equality with men in regard to property. If an owner of property dies intestate, leaving a widow and children, the widow takes half in her own right, and the children the other half; or if the wife is the owner, then the husband takes half and the children half, and neither can deprive the other of such share by will. In every respect as regards trading and suing and being sued, there is no difference.

—There has been erected at Harkins' Iron foundry, a new cupola of nearly double the capacity of the old one. It is placed in an addition to the foundry just built and considerable space is thus given to the molding floor occupied heretofore by the old cupola. We are glad to learn that Mr. Harkins has an abundant supply or orders for the manufacture of goods in his line. He has now twenty men in his employ.

—Alonzo Luce, in company with Miss Lucy Wyman, both of residents of Canaseraga, N. Y., were out walking last evening, and on their return to Miss Wyman's home, Alonzo, who had been several times refused her hand in marriage, again strongly urged his suit. Being again refused, he drew a revolver and shot her through the head. Then hastening home he locked himself in his room and shot himself in the head. Both will probably die.

—List of letters remaining in the Bristol Post Office, Wednesday April 23, 1879:—Mrs. Sophia Ball, Rebecca Butler, Josephine Butler, Theo. Cook, Joseph Cooper, Ellen Case, Edward N. Doan, George Dink, W. H. Garretson, Frank P. Green, Samuel Ingalden, Louisa King, Ellen Martin, Rosa McCollum, Kate Rusk, Mrs. Geo. Randall, Stewart Sherry, Henry Scott, Mrs. E. F. White, R. L. Yerkes.

—Wm. Dawson, a poor Quaker shoemaker at Spiceland, (Ind.,) is an excellent astronomer, who has made his own telescope constructed his own observatory, and for twenty years has furnished the Smithsonian Institution and the Meteorological Bureau with valuable statistics and observations.

—At Rondout, (N. Y.,) recently in a passion, Mrs. Margaret O'Reilly threw her infant at her mother. The child struck the stove, upset a pot of boiling soup, and died three hours afterwards. Mrs. O'Reilly was arrested.

☞ An Important

Subject for all, is how to reduce expenses to meet the exigencies of the times. It must be admitted that there is not one out of a hundred, who has not felt the pressure of the present dull state of the country, and in this town and vicinity, all have suffered more or less in the depreciation of stocks, real estate, and large reductions of wages. But there is a remedy for all this, we must be more careful in our purchases, and when we purchase make cash the basis of all transactions. If we can buy calico for 3 cts. per yard, dried apples at 3 cts. quart, currants 3 cts., and good coffee at 16 cts., it shows that a householder can live on a comparatively small sum per week, and the best plan is to follow the example of the majority, and deal at a store where no credit is given, and where cash buyers are not compelled to assist in paying the debts of trust customers. Read the list of new goods. Bargains from the Sheriff's hands: Lot of embroidered night gowns, 50 cts.; Ladies' basques, 35 cts.; Stockings, 4, 5, and 6 cts., gloves, 3, 4, and 5 cts.; veiling berege, 25 cts.; Ribbons, 2 and 3 cts. per yard; Corsets 25 cts.; Pins, 2 cts. yard; Best silk, 6 cts5 Ladies' Hats, 10 cts.; Feathers, real tips, 5 cts.; Muslin, 4 cts.; Mens' Pants, 65 cts.; Undershirts, 25 cts; Hats, 37 cts.; Large lot of Boys' Hats, 35 cts.; Shoes, $1.00 $1.25, etc.; Ladies' and Children's Shoes cheap, Lard, 8 cts.; Peaches, 5 cts.; Mackeral, 5 cts. Everything from a a needle to a pulpit, cheaper than manufacturers' prices, at the cheapest store in Bucks Co., Wood's, cor. Mill and Wood Streets, Bristol. Storekeepers and peddlers supplied.

☞ ENCOURAGE HOME INDUSTRY.—Semple's Best Six Cord Soft Spool Cotton, is unrivalled for strength, elasticity and softness of finish. Awarded medals at Paris, Philadelphia, New York, and Boston. Manufactured at Mount Holly, New Jersey. Ask your storekeeper for it and give it a trial.

Morrisville Notes.

A demijohn containing a gallon of apple whiskey was stolen from the residence of Rodman Scott, a short time since. The empty demijohn was found by D. P. Stackhouse alongside of his barn on Monday morning week. Mr. Scott and his family had not yet moved from the farm, but most of their goods were at the house at the time of the theft. A keg of lard was also stolen from his cellar, and on Tuesday evening a house in the borough was searched, but the missing articles were not found.

An entertainment was given by the children belonging to the Temperance Union, at the M. E. Church, on last Saturday evening.

The missionary who was announced to preach at the Presbyterian Church last Sunday morning, was not there, but expects now to speak in that church some time in June.

An ice-wagon belonging to James Fury was recently struck whilst crossing the railroad track, and a tramp was knocked down by a passing train a few days ago.

Another new house is expected to be built in Morrisville the coming summer, by John Davies.

The owners of gardens and lots are taking advantage of the fine weather this week and are busily engaged in planting seeds. Mr. Phineas Jenkins planted potatoes on St. Patrick's day, but on the 17th of April he examined them and found them just the same as the day he planted them.

Notice!

In the face of everything, Wanamaker & Brown increased their great Clothing business last year at Oak Hall nearly a quarter of a million dollars, and for 1879 the new plans will make the house more popular and increase the business much more. Eighteen years in the people's service at the old corner of Sixth and Market has taught us how to do the business well,

Notice!

Whatever may be said, no house in the United States sells anything like so much Clothing at Retail as Oak Hall, and no house in Philadelphia sells more than a quarter as many goods as Mr. Wanamaker sells in Clothing alone. Doing this large business shows the people's regard for our goods, and enables us to buy cheaply and sell at small profits.

Notice!

New patterns have been made this year and new styles introduced through Mr. Robert C. Ogden (formerly partner of the famous firm of Devlin & Co., New York), who is now associated with Oak Hall, and will give his whole energies and valuable experience to improving the manufacture of our Boys' and Men's Clothing. We do not buy Clothing like the dealers, but make it expressly for our own sales. The Spring stock is splendid, and no other make of goods, so far, have as much merit, or are sold as cheaply.

Notice!

Impressions have been erroneously given to the effect that Mr. John Wanamaker, who founded Oak Hall, is not interested in the old store, and that it does not have his attention; on the contrary, his ownership of it remains unchanged, and he has lost none of his love for it. Every day finds him supervising all its departments. Mr. William H. Wanamaker spends his entire time on the Oak Hall business.

DOMESTIC GREETING.

As homeward comes the married man,
He's met by wife at door,
With fond embrace and loving kiss
And—"Baby's throat is sore!"

"And did you think to stop at Brown's
And get that marabout
I ordered yesterday?—and, dear
Fred's boots are all worn out!

"I'm glad you are so early, John.
So much I miss you, dear—
I've had a letter from mamma;
She's coming to live here.

"How very glad you look, dear John;
I knew that you would be—
The flour's out, the butter, and
You must send home some tea.

"That plumber has been here again;
If you don't pay, he'll sue:
And Mr. Pendergast called in
To say your rent was due.

"Fred's trousers are half cotton, John,
You thought they were all wool—
Oh, that reminds me that your son
Was whipped to-day at school.

"The roof has leaked and spoiled the rugs
Upon the upper hall;
And Jane must go, the careless thing!
She let the mirror fall.

"To-day, as she was moving it,
(The largest one, dear John),
Of course, it broke; it also broke
The lamp it fell upon.

"What makes you look so grave, my love?
Take off your things and wipe
Your feet—and only think, to-day
Jane broke your meerschaum pipe.

"Oh, John! that horrid, horrid word!
You do not love me, dear;
I wish that I—boo-hoo—were dead—
You're cross as any bear."

An abrupt leave-taking is always the best.—Richter.

They who have true light in themselves seldom become satellites.

From the fact that Nero fiddled while Rome was burning, we may infer that business had been pretty dull and he had insured the old place for all it was worth.

"Ma," said a little girl, "if you'll let me buy some candy, I'll be good." "My child," solemnly responded the mother, "you should not be good for pay, you should be good for nothing."

At a dinner given in his honor, recently, Victor Hugo said, in response to a toast of his health: "I am honored by you beyond what I deserve, but your love for me is according to my wishes."

One of the Professors of Mathematics in Michigan University, who is known all over the world, went to school only six weeks, and while the oxen were resting at noon executed his first mathematical work upon a ploughshare with a piece of chalk.

Mr. Carlyle's house in Chelsea will by and by become the scene of a honeymoon. Miss Mary Carlyle Aitken, the daughter of his sister, a young lady who has long been the old philosopher's care-taker, is to be married to her cousin, the son of his brother. The young couple will thereafter live with their uncle.

Dr. Schliephmann has just deposited in the British Museum a dagger believed to be made of meteoric steel and exhumed within the royal palace of Troy. This is the first iron discovered by him in his excavations, either in the Troad or the Peloponesus, and is of the very greatest archeological interest.

A few days ago, at the breakfast table, his mother said she had dreamt that a man had shot her in the arm and then she woke up. Master five-year-old listened with becoming gravity until the story was done, and then he said: "It's a pity, mamma, you didn't keep on sleeping. You'd have hung that man before you woke up."

Jerome Bonaparte, a grand nephew of Napoleon I., has for many years been a resident of Baltimore and a prominent member of its bar. He is named as a candidate for the vacant position of United States District Judge. It would sound well—"Judge Bonaparte"—the first of his race to wear the ermine, and be addressed as "Your Honor."

An impromptu mock auction sale of women was amusing and profitable, at first, in a Racine (Wis.) church fair. The young men bid liberally for the attractive girls, and it was all very funny indeed until an ugly but influential sister was put up. The auctioneer was obliged to knock her down at twenty-five cents, and she was so angry that she put on her things and went home.

There is a lad in Machiasport, Me., who ought to have future. He is not more than five years old and yet has succeeded in having a father, a mother, a grandfather, two grandmothers, two great-grandfathers, three great-grandmothers, and one great, great-grandmother—all alive. If he has so many ancestors before he is fairly in pantaloons, how many will he be likely to have when he comes of age and gets married?

A rare occurrence is noted in the News from the far East, the conversion of a European to Buddhism. The person in question is an Austrian savant, and he obtained from the King of Siam permission to pass his noviciate in the magnificent temple attached to the palace. His reception gave rise to a most imposing ceremony. He will have to spend four years completely isolated from the world.

M. Grevy, the new French President, has an acknowledged talent as an author of epigrams. He is a very good chess-player; and being asked recently to write something, however trifling, in an album, wrote as follows: "Life is like a game of chess; each one holds his rank according to his quality; but when the game is over, kings, queens, knights, and all the rest, are thrown into one common box."

Out in one of the suburban towns at the East End, there lives one of the brightest, handsomest and wittiest five-year-old boys in the country. He has a phenomenal style of saying good things, and his latest is worthy of publication. A short time ago he went with his father to see a colt. He patted the colt's head and made quite a fuss over it, until finally the stable man told him to be careful that the colt did not turn around and kick him. When the little chap went home, his mother asked him what he thought about the colt. "I like him pretty well," was the reply. "He's real tame in front, but he's awful wild behind."

Of Edgar A. Poe, Colonel Higginson, who saw the poet once, says that he had an essentially ideal face; not noble, yet anything but coarse, with brilliant eyes, an ample forehead, and a look of over-sensitiveness. Of Poe's betrothed, in her later years, the Colonel says: "There she dwelt in her little suite of rooms, bearing youth still in her heart, and in her voice, and on her hair also, and in her dress. Her dimly-lighted parlor was always decked, here and there, with scarlet; and she sat robed in white, her back always to the light, with a discreetly-tinted shadow over her still thoughtful and noble face. She seemed a person embalmed while still alive."

Of Professor Thomas Thacher, of Yale, it is related that in the days of his tutorship his students played a curious prank with him. He had ordered a ton of coal for his room, and it arrived at night time and was deposited at his door, it being then too late to be got in. During the night some of the students who were unfavorably inclined toward the tutor determined to put it in for him. This they did, piece for piece, and through the window. Tutor Thacher was obliged to get under his bed to escape being stoned, or rather, coaled to death. In after years at a public supper, when asked as to the amount of his salary, Professor Thacher said, "$1,000, with coal put in."

HOW LINCOLN RELIEVED ROSECRANS.—The following bit of war history is related by the Toledo (O. Journal: Some weeks after the disastrous battle of Chickamauga, while yet Chattanooga was in a state of siege, General Steedman was surprised one day to receive a telegram from Abraham Lincoln to come to Washington. Seeking out Thomas, he laid the telegram before him, and was instructed to set out at once. Repairing to the White House, he was warmly received by Mr. Lincoln.

Mr. Lincoln's first question was abrupt and to the point:

"General Steedman, what is your opinion of General Rosecrans?"

General Steedman, hesitating a moment, said: "Mr. President, I would rather not express my opinion of my superior officer."

Mr. Lincoln said: "It is the man who does not want to express an opinion whose opinion I want. I am besieged on all sides with advice. Every day I get letters from army officers asking me to allow them to come to Washington to impart some valuable knowledge in their possession?"

"Well," Mr. President, said General Steedman, "you are the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, and if you order me to speak I will do so."

"Then I will order an opinion."

General Steedman then answered: "Since you command me, Mr. President, I will say General Rosecrans is a splendid man to command a victorious army."

"But what kind of a man is he to command a defeated army?" said Mr. Lincoln.

General Steedman in reply, said cautiously, "I think there are two or three men in that army that would be better.

Then, with his quaint humor, Mr. Lincoln propounded this question: "Who, beside yourself, General Steedman, is there in that army who would make a better commander?"

General Steedman said promptly: "General George H. Thomas."

"I am glad to hear you say so," said Mr. Lincoln, "that is my own opinion exactly. But Mr. Stanton is against him, and it was only yesterday that a powerful New York delegation was here to protest against his appointment because he is from a rebel State and can not be trusted."

Said General Steedman: "A man who will leave his own State (Thomas was a Virginian), his friends, all his associates, to follow the flag of his country, can be trusted in any position to which he may be called."

That night the order went forth from Washington relieving General Rosecrans of the command of the Army of the Cumberland and appointing Thomas in his place.

A VENERABLE UMBRELLA.—One of the articles exhibited at the Albany Loan Exhibition last week was an umbrella more than one hundred years old. Its possession is a wonderful tribute to the honesty of its owner's associates. The Albany Journal says of this relic: Its present owner is one of our best known and most reputable citizens, and is as incapable of doing violence to the truth as George Washington himself was. And he is our authority for asserting that this umbrella has been in his continuous and uninterrupted possession for more than half a century, and that previously it had been in the hands of one of his immediate ancestors for as long a time. We are unable to say what restraining influences were ought to bear upon this umbrella to induce it to turn a deaf ear to those normal nomadic instincts of its race, which it had only to follow to become hopelessly lost sooner or later—probably sooner. We simply know that it has not been kept under a glass case in the family drawing-room, or under lock and key in a wardrobe in the family garret. It has during the entire century of its existence been as much exposed as if it had been deposited in one of the current savings banks.

AN ARIZONA VENUS.—The Trinidad News says; Miss Carrie Burne, in company with her father, passed through El Moro yesterday, on a wild mustang, en route for Kansas from Tucson, Arizona, some seven hundred miles away, and have yet some six hundred more to make before their journey is ended. Miss Carrie has rather a pretty face and impressive form—not such a one as the young man of to-day with the blonde moustache and hair parted in the middle would select to whisper sweet sentiments over the garden gate to—but a girl for an Indian fight or a "bar" hunt you could rely on every time. She sported nary diamond nor coral necklace, but was muscled like an Amazon, and had a fist like a Morrissey. She was a girl of nerve, too, we reckon, for on her saddle hung a Ballard rifle and a brace of Colt's revolvers. She informed the writer that she had seen much of life in the last twelve months, and but little of newspapers, and was anxious to know what was going on in the world. We offered her a copy of the Weekly News and the Denver Tribune, which she accepted, and went on her way rejoicing.

MOTH PREVENTIVES.—Mix together alcohol ½ pint; turpentine ½ pint; camphor 3 oz. Wrap the woollen clothes in linen and place in the box with them crumpled pieces of paper dipped in the liquid, or sprinkle the clothes in a tight fitting box with benzine. Do not bring a light near when first opening the box, as the vapor of the benzine is inflammable. But the only sure preventives are dryness, light, air, and cleanliness. The moth loves darkness, dirt and damp, and give them these conditions, no badly smelling articles will keep them away.—Journal of Applied Science.

LAMPS INDICATING THE TIME.—Lamps are constructed in pans, so that they indicate the time during the night. The oil is contained in a tall, narrow vessel, placed vertically, and connected at the bottom with the wick of the lamp. This vessel is graduated, beginning at the top with VII. After one hour's burning the level of the will be at VIII, and so on. The lamp burns with perfect regularity, and a reflector is so placed as to throw the light on his cylindrical dial. The level of the oil, which can easily be seen, always correctly indicates the time.—La Nature.

And so the two midgets of New York are to be married! Louise Zarate, the prospective bride, is fifteen years old, and weighs a trifle less than five pounds. Gen. Mite, whose real name is Francis J. Flynn weighs 9 pounds and is 14 years old. The bracelets worn by the bride-elect cannot be buckled around the third finger of a man of ordinary size, and her shoes are two and a half inches long. The wedding will probably take place next Saturday or Sunday. The bride is to wear a white satin dress studded with seed pearls. Small as her form is, it is estimated that the bridal dress contains no less than 1,000 pearls.

There are seventy-four female members of school committees in Massachusetts; they are said to be efficient in their work.

It is said that more than half of the pupils in the Buffalo schools are of German parentage.

THE NEW WEED Sewing Machine!

THE Most Complete Machine in the Market.

WHILE the New Weed retains all the qualities of the old model, it has gained the following new ones.

Lightness of Running and Noiselessness of Movement.

THE CAM has been replaced by a crank, giving an accurate movement to the needle bar, without noise.

FOR THE VIBRATING ARM is substituted a reciprocating shaft.

THE TAKE UP is entirely left out, the needle bar serving for that purpose.

The Stitch Regulating Nut is on the bed of the Machine. The upper thread slips into all its guides leaving only two places to thread.

The Shuttle is the most complete one ever made for easy threading, only one place to thread. These are a few of the improved qualities of the New Weed. In buying a Weed you know you are getting a new machine as they cannot use the old ones to make new ones of. There are a great many machines being sold for new, that are only old ones rebuilt.

We know there are a great many people yet wanting Sewing Machines, and there are a great many old machines that ought to be exchanged for new ones, and to those wanting machines we would say cast aside your prejudices in favor of this or that machine, and come and see the light running, easy threading, no trouble, substantial, handsome Weed. Sold cheap on easy terms. Old machines taken in exchange for new ones. Old machines for sale cheap.
